Died in Great Agony.

Arvid Halmpers died at the Dr. Ravensway sanatorium Saturday of last week, September 3, with ptomaine poisoning. He gave his age as 24 years and his home as Stanford, Conn., to which place the remains were shipped Sunday after his father had been communicated with relative to the disposition of the body.

The young man took sick on Monday of last week. At the time he was with the Jones Bros. so-called wild west show which gave an exhibition in Booneville on that day. Halmpers was exhibited as the "snake eating wonder" in a sideshow on the street. About noon he was taken violently ill and was left by the show people among strangers. He was taken to the sanatorium and cared for by the Sisters of the Benedictine order who have charge of the institution. Dr. A. J. Smith treated him professionally and did for the young man all he could to alleviate his suffering. To Dr. Smith he told a pitiful story about the treatment he received while with the show. It was apparent that the young man was of that mental character so easily influenced by stronger minds. He related to Dr. Smith that the man conducting the snake show would force him by threats and cruel treatment to perform as a snake eater; that he would beat him unmercifully, etc. His story was undoubtedly true as evidence of it was found on the body of the young man in the shape of bruises on the body and scars on the head. In order to make him look as hideous as possible the manager of the snake show had all the hair shaved from the young man's head, except a little on the crown of the head, and covered with a coat of red paint, he said. This was also evidently true.

A short time before his death he in his delirium would ask that those around him see that he was not allowed to return to the show and also that "they not paint me any more." Before becoming irrational in his illness Halmpers gave the name of his parents and their postoffice address which was found to be correct as he gave it. He stated that his father was employed in a brass foundry at Stanford, Connecticut. A telegram to the father at the address given by the son was replied to right away and as soon as the father was notified of the amount of money required to prepare the body for shipment to Connecticut and to prepay the express on it, he immediately sent the amount by wire and the body was shipped Sunday.

There is much feeling here over the way the young fellow was treated by the show people and there is some talk of prosecutions being instituted against them.—Boonville Republican.

Birthday Surprise

Tuesday, Sept. 13, 1910, is a day long to be remembered by F. C. Blackburn, of Malta Bend. The event was a birthday surprise given him by his wife assisted by Mr. J. W. Blackburn and Mrs. E. B. Dyer. Although Frank is pretty hard to fool he was thoroughly "taken in" this time. It took the combined efforts of his wife and relatives to keep him at home as he was determined to go to Waverly. But he did not go.

The luncheon was very elaborate the most striking feature being a huge birthday cake in the center of the table and on which were the letters F. C. B. and Sept. 13, 77-10.

The following guests were present: J. W. Blackburn and wife, F. B. Dyer and wife, J. E. Blackburn and wife, R. L. Utz and wife, E. E. Sailor and wife, Clarence Blackburn, Misses Susie Waters and Ann Barley of Higginville.

Croquet was the game of the afternoon, and much enjoyed by the players in fact the entire time was thoroughly enjoyed by all present and the guests departed carrying memories of a day well spent and wishing Mr. Blackburn many happy returns of the day.

They were married on Thursday, Sept. 1st, and have gone to housekeeping near Mt. Horeb church on the D. Sherman farm. Mrs. Blackberry is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Alice in Wonderland at the Illinois Fair.

The Illinois State Fair has done itself proud this year in the number and character of attractions. In addition to Wright Brothers' Aeroplane and Barney Oldfield's racing automobilists, the speed program embraces cash prizes of $18,000 and will excel all previous years in point of entries. The improvements on the buildings and grounds have been vast and costly. Every inch of ground is filled inside and outside Machinery Hall. The horses, cattle, swine, sheep, and poultry exhibits are filled to their capacity. An exhibit of old time farming implements and utensils will be a novelty worth witnessing.

Reduced rates will be made by the Chicago & Alton; this line has also promised adequate special train service to and from Springfield all during Fair week. Fully 25 per cent increase in attendance over last year is expected. The Chicago & Alton and the State Fair have become so closely associated that they are already called "The Only Way" and "The Only Fair."
